

Buried in the “et al”

Buried in the “et al” . . .
 . . . better than the “not at all”?
 I made a contribution,
 but got no attribution.
 I listened to the presentation,
 . . . and there was no hesitation,
 to take all the credit and the fame;
 I never even heard my name.
 Life is not always fair,
 a truth I must humbly bear,
 as pride goes before a fall,
 . . . buried in the “et al.”
