

Incision

You don't trust me
But you must.
I hold the thread in one
The scissors in the other.

But which to use?
The hands, they know.
Master, disciple, muse
Not always fully mine.

Can I trust them myself?
Your soul cries out
In blood-red tones.
You tell them what to do.

In that place between fear and faith,
Your transference and mine
We meet, clasp hands
And . . . dance.
